

Craig Chan

Head of Global FX Strategy, Nomura

陈立伟先生

野村外汇市场策略全球主管

Craig Chan is Nomura's Head of Global FX Strategy, leading the firm's initiatives to integrate FX strategy globally in order to respond to cross-border needs of clients. Prior to his current role, he was Global Head of Emerging Markets Strategy, responsible for EM currency and rates research for the firm. He is based in Singapore. Craig has been with Nomura since October 2008, prior to which he was with Lehman Brothers. Before joining Lehman Brothers in 2006, Craig has worked in forex, fixed income and economic research roles since 1995 in Singapore and Hong Kong, and has frequent dialogues with monetary policy officials in the Asia-Pacific region. In the 2013 and 2014 Institutional Investor polls for Asia FX & Rates Strategy, Craig's team was ranked #1 and #2 respectively. Craig also received the most votes for any fixed income strategist in the Institutional Investor All-Asia Currency & Rates Strategy category in 2012, 2013, 2014 and 2015.

Craig was born and educated in Edinburgh, Scotland, and holds a Bachelor (Honors) of Statistics and Economics degree from Heriot-Watt University, Edinburgh.